Maharaja Ripudaman Singh

Maharaja Ripudaman Singh was born on March 4, 1883 in Nabha, the only son of Maharaja Hira Singh Ji. During his membership of the Imperial Legislative Council from 1906 to 1908, he pursued the interests of the Sikhs and played a role in the Reformist Legislation. Similarly, he also attended the coronation of George V in 1911 on behalf of the Nabha princely state. In 1906, he got the Anand Marriage Act written by Bhai Kahaan Singh ji, which was in force from 1909 to 1949.

After the death of his father in 1911, taking over the reins of the Nabha state, he made many reforms in the judiciary of the state and made many progressive laws. In 1923, due to your patriotism, the British took over the rule of the Nabha princely state from you and exiled you to Kodaikanal (Madras), where he died in 1942 at the age of 59.
